'Education is a shared commitment among motivated students, dedicated teachers and zealous parents with high expectations'

Dear Parents

Warm welcome to the new academic session 2022-23 which is still obscured with the challenge of COVID-19. No doubt Corona has disrupted most of our work and daily activities but it could not deter our fervour to survive and beaver away despite many challenges. Hats off to our fervent and stalwart teachers who left no stone unturned to make learning a smooth sailing for our students.

I want to express my gratitude to my esteemed parents for their commendable support because your crucial role has been so accommodating to make this e-learning experiment so facile. Students are compelled to spend long hours in front of their mobiles and computer screens which is making the parents apprehensive which is not baseless. We can sense the anxiety you have about your children falling behind, but make sure they are engaged in the daily routine of learning. Spend quality time with your ward. We need to jointly plan and give them that sense of responsibility. Keep them inspired and interested and prepare them for returning to school.

Together we will vanquish this challenge.
